tarnished with murder and genocide. Superstition is heavily ingrained in Cambodian culture, with many locals believing that the spirits of the dead—particularly those who died violent or unnatural deaths—roam the land, especially after the genocide in the 1970s. Some locals say that during dusk, they sometimes see a multitude of apparitions roaming the fields or they will see a strange mist moving with a purpose.

Here are some of the most notable haunted places and traditions in Cambodia:

Tuol Sleng Genocide Museum (S-21):
This former high school became a brutal Khmer Rouge prison, this site is widely regarded as one of the most terrifying places on earth. Visitors and staff have reported hearing moaning and chains rattling, and it is believed the spirits of the nearly 20,000 victims still haunt the halls. If the walls of this prison could talk, it would talk about the needless murders, suicides, beatings, tortures that took place.

From this point on, DO NOT read on, as I will become very descriptive on the harsh elements of this prison and talk about what transpired at this prison. So, if you are weak at heart, please stop reading at this point of the article. The Khmer Rouge, under the leadership of Pol Pot from 1975 to 1979, employed a systematic and brutal range of torture techniques designed to extract confessions from perceived "enemies of the state." These practices were most documented at the S-21 (Tuol Sleng) interrogation center. Interrogators used bamboo or wooden clubs, steel bars, and ox-cart axles to inflict severe blunt-force trauma. Wires were attached to prisoners' toes, ears, or other sensitive areas to deliver painful shocks. Usually after a few electric shocks, the next torture was waterboarding. This included mock drownings and pouring water directly into the nose to simulate the sensation of drowning. The torture wasn't over yet, then we have mutilations. Survivors have testified to having fingernails or toenails pulled out and the use of pliers to mutilate genitals or nipples. Prisoners were frequently hung upside down from gallows until they lost consciousness. Interrogators poured salt water or chemicals into open wounds to exacerbate pain. A survivor claims that at night you would hear disembodied screams. The screams would move about in the room, going from one section of the room to another section of the room.

A survivor mentions that after being tortured, he would see shadow figures moving about and demonic faces coming out of the walls. Some other tortures were not allowing inmates to sleep during intense interrogation cycles. Some prisoners were forced to eat human feces or drink human urine. Prisoners were kept shackled to floors or long bars in overcrowded, unhygienic cells, often forbidden from speaking or moving. The primary goal was to force prisoners to write long, "fanciful" confessions admitting to being spies for the CIA, KGB, or Vietnam. After "confessing," most prisoners were taken to the Killing Fields (such as Choeung Ek), where they were killed with pickaxes, machetes, or iron bars to save on ammunition.

In many cases, the Khmer Rouge arrested and killed entire families, including infants, to ensure no "traitors" remained to take revenge. Some witnesses at the Khmer Rouge Tribunal described cadres eating the organs (such as livers) of victims.

A multitude of apparitions walking through a Cambodian rice field that was part of the infamous Killing Field - Choeung Ek.

The Killing Fields (Choeung Ek):
The mass grave site near Phnom Penh, where nearly 9,000 bodies were found, is reported to be home to restless spirits and the scene of uncanny sightings. Locals have heard disembodied screams and moaning. The screams and moaning will not stop. The horror that happened here will live on forever. The negative energy is so strong, you can actually feel it in the atmosphere. One American visitor says you can feel the negativity in the air, you can cut it with a knife. The American visitor who does not want to be named says that while he was in the Killing Fields area, he almost passed out. His energy was drained and had a hard time keeping his balance. When he left the killing fields, he felt okay and was back to normal.

Bokor Hill Station:
Located in Kampot, this abandoned French colonial resort is notorious for its eerie atmosphere, with reports of ghost sightings in the derelict church and hotel. Bokor Hill Station in Cambodia is widely considered haunted and is frequently listed as one of the country's most haunted places. It is a "ghost town" shrouded in mist, known for its eerie atmosphere, abandoned French colonial buildings, and a tragic history involving thousands of deaths during its construction. Built in the 1920s, nearly 1,000 lives were lost during the harsh construction of the resort, leading locals to believe the area is filled with spirits. The station was abandoned twice—first in the 1940s and again in the 1970s during the Khmer Rouge period, leaving buildings, such as the old church and palace, to decay, enhancing their eerie reputation. Local residents and park rangers have reported hearing the dead walk in the old buildings. Its reputation and ghostly atmosphere prompted its use in horror films, such as R-Point, and crime dramas, such as City of Ghosts. While much of the area has been developed into a modern resort (including the renovation of Le Bokor Palace), the ruins, including the old church and the derelict post office, retain a reputation for being haunted by the victims of its tragic history. People report of being touched by unseen hands. Boramey Lim says while visiting, she looked in the mirror and saw behind her a naked man bleeding and asking for help. She turned around and the man disappeared. She realized she saw a ghost.

The "Ghost House" in Kampong Chhnang:
A small, modern house built on National Highway No. 5 is famous for having no dust inside, despite being empty for years. Local legend says a ghost purchased the house in a dream for 3 taels of gold, and residents now pray when passing.

Murder Island (Koh Kor):
A formerly beautiful, secluded island that was used as a prison and execution site by the Khmer Rouge. Residents often report seeing ghosts in black clothes and hearing cries at night.

Pchum Ben (Ancestor Day):
This is a 15-day religious festival where Cambodians believe that the spirits of their ancestors, who are unable to pass on, return to earth. Many make offerings at pagodas to feed these hungry spirits. It is common in rural areas to see effigies—scarecrows called Ting Mong—placed outside homes to ward off evil spirits, and sometimes even diseases. While some visitors seek out these locations for paranormal experiences, for many Cambodians, these are serious, respectful, and often terrifying aspects of daily life, deeply connected to the country's, sometimes, traumatic past.

IS MASOALA NATIONAL PARK IN MADAGASCAR HAUNTED?

Masoala National Park in Madagascar is not considered haunted in the Western paranormal sense, but it is deeply steeped in local folklore, legends, and "creepy" wildlife stories. Local beliefs include stories of spirits in the forest, and some legends suggest that disrespecting the forest can lead to harm.

Madagascar Travel and Tours +4

Here are the key "haunted" or spooky aspects of the area:

- The "Eyes of the Forest": The park's name, Masoala, refers to the aye-aye lemur, whose glowing, bright eyes in the night are seen as creepy, say and.
- Haunting Animal Sounds: The red-ruffed lemurs, unique to this area, produce loud, haunting calls every morning. Additionally, the songs of migrating humpback whales in the adjacent bay are described as haunting.
- Folklore and Legends: Some local stories concern the spirits of the forest and tales from the era of kings and wars.
- Spooky Wildlife: The forest is home to leaf-tailed geckos (which are extremely well-camouflaged) and other odd creatures.
- The "Ghost" Lemur: The Greater Bamboo Lemur, once thought to be extinct, is sometimes referred to as a "ghost of the forest".

Madagascar may not have that many ghosts, but they definitely have a lot of cryptids. Here is what is said about Madagascar's cryptids:

Madagascar is home to several cryptids, often rooted in local folklore or potential sightings of sub-fossil species, including the Kalanoro (small, hairy humanoids) and giant lemurs like the Tratratratra and Kidoky. Other notable cryptids include the tortoise-like Ranta, the donkey-like Mangarsahoc, and the giant, jumping Tokandia.

- Kalanoro: Described as small, hairy humanoids with long, unkempt fingernails, fangs, and sometimes backward-facing feet. They are believed to live in the rainforests, often described as mischievous or malevolent spirits, though some stories depict them as loyal, forest-dwelling beings.
- Giant Lemurs (Tratratratra & Kidoky): These are believed to be sightings of Megaladapis or other large, sub-fossil lemurs that may have survived longer than scientifically believed. The Tratratratra was famously described by a 17th-century French governor as having a human-like face, while the Kidoky is described as a giant sifaka with dark fur and white spots.
- Ranta: A giant tortoise cryptid reported to live in the caves of Madagascar, which some speculate could be a surviving Aldabrachelys grandidieri.
- Mangarsahoc & Tokandia: Described by early visitors as large, enigmatic animals—the Mangarsahoc as a donkey-like creature with long ears, and the Tokandia as a large, jumping, tree-dwelling creature.
- Antamba: A mysterious creature described as a large carnivore, sometimes linked to legends of a giant version of the fossa.

Atomic-Man, Atomic Mouse team up with the Demon Warrior in Masoala National Park in Madagestar. The team is searching and documenting the following cryptids - Kalanoro, Vorompatra, Kilopioisofy

These creatures are central to Madagascan folklore and are sometimes mentioned in discussions about biodiversity, where they represent potentially unknown or recently extinct fauna. When going to Madagascar, be on the lookout for these 2 cryptids: Vorompatra and Kilopilopitsofy. The locals have recently seen these two cryptids lurking around.

Sapporo and the surrounding Hokkaido region are considered quite haunted, with numerous urban legends and "ghost hot spots" popular among thrill-seekers. Notable haunted locations include the Okiku Doll at Mannenji Temple, reputed to have growing hair, and the ruins of a lakeside hotel near Lake Shikotsu, often associated with ghostly hitchhikers. This is a place I always wanted to go. I heard so much about it when I was in the Army in Tokyo. I placed it on my bucket list and to this day, it's still on my bucket list...sigh. Let's dive in and learn about the haunted areas of Sapporo, Japan.

The Okiku Doll (Mannenji Temple):
Located in nearby Iwamizawa (often associated with Sapporo tales), this doll is said to house the spirit of a young girl, with hair that scientists reportedly confirmed is human and continues to grow. The Okiku Doll is one of Japan's most famous haunted objects. While now kept at Mannenji Temple in Iwamizawa (near Sapporo), the doll was originally purchased at a marine exhibition at Tanuki-koji, Sapporo's famous shopping street. Locals claim that they have seen the doll move its head, blink its eyes. Many people say the doll looks very creepy. One visitor says that the doll locked eyes with her and she felt a horrible tingly sensation throughout her whole body. Her hands would not stop shaking and they went numb. Moving away from the doll, everything went back to normal, hands stopped shaking, the numbness vanished and the horrible sensation went away.

Bibai's Round Schoolhouse (formerly part of Shoto/Numahigashi Elementary School) in Hokkaido:
An abandoned, circular school building between Sapporo and Asahikawa where visitors report hearing screams and seeing shadowy figures. This abandoned circular building is a popular destination for ghost hunters and thrill seekers. Witnesses report seeing shadow figures and hearing the sounds of a girl giggling in the surrounding forest. The site was abandoned in 1974 following a coal mine closure, it is notorious for reports of mysterious lights, disembodied screams, and a ghostly girl in a red backpack. Legends say a young girl vanished during a break in the 1970s, and her ghost is often heard laughing or seen in the surrounding forest. Visitors have reported seeing strange, bobbing lights, with some claiming the figures emerge from a "glowing" or "shimmering" patch in the wall. Reported phenomena include hearing footsteps, screams, and twigs snapping. Some rumors suggest visitors have disappeared or lost their sanity after visiting, and it is frequently cited by paranormal investigators as a major hotspot. The site, often covered in snow or flooded in lower levels, is considered dangerous and is frequently visited by thrill-seekers, despite the unsettling rumors. Many locals have encountered "the Vanished Girl" or also known as the "Backpack Girl". Some investigators have heard "tapping" sounds on trees as they approached. They believe that the Backpack Girl is making those tapping sounds. Locals believe that the Backpack Girl will try and lure people into the woods. One local followed the Backpack Girl into the woods, and he fell and broke his leg. Some spirit mediums reportedly refuse to return to the site due to overwhelming negative energy. An education center was first established on the site in 1906. The iconic circular building was constructed later, in 1959, to accommodate children of local coal miners. The schoolhouse is now a deteriorating ruin deep in the forest.

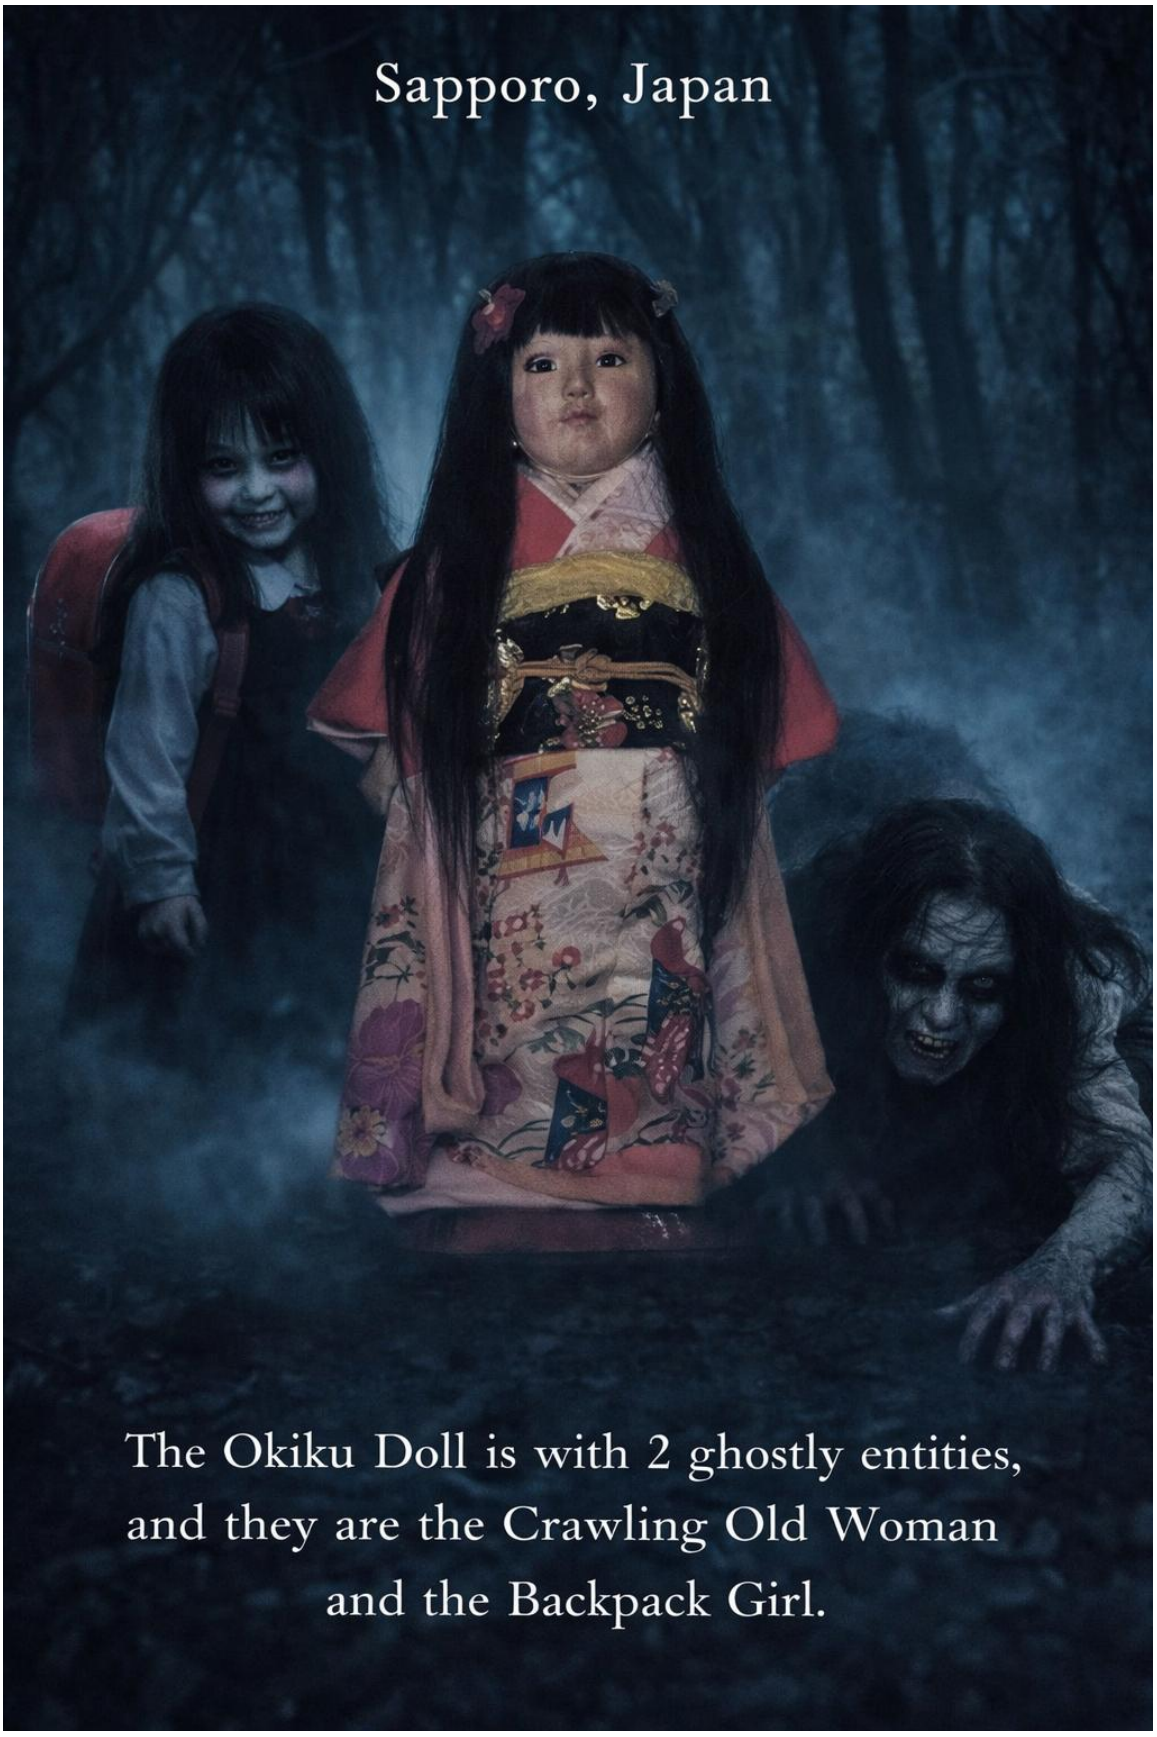
Lake Shikotsu Road (Route 512):
Known for rumors of "ghost hitchhikers" and white shadows haunting the ruins of a nearby hotel, commonly discussed by local drivers. Lake Shikotsu Road (Route 512) and the surrounding area are widely considered haunted in Japanese urban legend and local folklore. The road, which connects Sapporo and Lake Shikotsu, is associated with several eerie tales. Hakiro Baba (The Crawling Old Woman) is one of the most famous legends tied to the road between Chitose and Lake Shikotsu. She is described as the ghost of an old woman who chases cars or runs parallel to them, allegedly able to keep pace with vehicles until they exceed 80 km/hr. She is known to try and make people crash their cars, so they can join her in the afterlife. Local warnings suggest that ghosts in the area may "attach" themselves to travelers. It is a common local custom to sprinkle salt on oneself before entering home after visiting to drive away these Invisible Hitchhikers. The name "Shikotsu" can be phonetically associated with the Japanese word for "death" (shi) or "skeleton".



Sapporo, Japan
The Okiku Doll is with 2 ghostly entities, and they are the Crawling Old Woman and the Backpack Girl.

The Haunted Hotel Ruins:
Near the road sit the ruins of a lakeside hotel where mysterious phenomena, such as a "white shadow" or sounds of lapping water, have been reported. It is a popular destination for local bikers and car enthusiasts interested in the occult. One biker saw the White Shadow entity and then felt hands on his legs. The hands were preventing him to ride his motorcycle. Another visitor saw the White Shadow looking down at him from a second story window, he was able to make out 2 glowing red eyes.

Historical Village of Hokkaido (Kaitaku-no Mura):
An open-air museum where some visitors have reported eerie, "ghost town" sensations or strange occurrences, according to some Tripadvisor reviewers. A Japanese ghost hunting group called the Yurei Hantaa claim that they have captured many EVPs at this village and some of their investigators have seen partial apparitions. One apparition that they saw was a "half girl", they could see her from the waist down, but not the waist up. As they watched her, she walked into a wall and vanished.

Yubari School:
Located in a former coal-mining town near Sapporo, this abandoned school is reportedly haunted by strange noises and a "presence" felt in specific rooms. The presence is felt with extreme cold spots. Sometimes people hear whispering in their ears. One person claims to have received a huge scratch on their back. The scratch mark was singular and somewhat deep, causing it to bleed.

Tanuki-koji Shopping Arcade:
As one of the oldest shopping districts in the city, parts of it (especially the less renovated sections) are sometimes associated with old-city urban legends. Some people claim that they have seen apparitions walking around. Locals say that the spirits are benevolent and will cause you no harm.

The Persistence of Ghosts (Book Review)
Real Ghost Encounters, Residual Hauntings, and the Theory Behind Why Spirits Persist

Comments: As I go through this book, something that really stands out is a partial writing from Tim R. Swartz. The following statement that Tim writes is so TRUE! "You would think, given that ghosts and spirits are so pervasive in our history and cultural evolution, that we would have figured out by now if they weren't real. Sure, we have scientists who adamantly declare that there is no scientific evidence for ghosts. No ghost has ever been captured and studied in a laboratory, and no ghostly activity has occurred in a repeatable fashion in a way that could be studied with modern scientific discipline. So, therefore no ghosts. But, someone forgot to tell the ghosts! Year after year, century after century, the reports roll in. For something that isn't real, people sure do see a lot of ghosts!" This statement is so TRUE. People see ghosts all over the world. Ghost reports NEVER stop. Ghosts are seen by multiple witnesses, I know, I am a retired Paranormal Investigator! Why are ghosts so persistent?? According to Michael Waterman, Egyptologist - the ancient Egyptians were very "ghost friendly". I used to wonder why some people would place coins on the eyes of the deceased. Hercules Invictus - contributor says that coins were placed on the eyes, or under the tongue to pay Charon the Ferryman, who would help their loved one cross the river Styx and reach the realm of Hades, Lord of the Dead. The dearly departed was then either buried or burned, as per local custom or situational circumstance.

After you die, do we face punishment for our sins? Sean Casteel discusses this in "Prayers for the Visiting Dead". Sean says that according to the Vatican II Council (1962-1965), "The doctrine of purgatory clearly demonstrates that even when the guilt of sin has been taken away, punishment for it or the consequences of it may remain to be expiated or cleansed. In purgatory, the souls who died in the charity of God and truly repentant, but who had not made satisfaction with adequate penance for their sins and omissions are cleaned after death with punishment designed to purge away their debt". As you go through this book, there is an analytical look at the possibility that ghosts could be demons. Scott Corrales looks at Latin American Phantasmagoria.

I highly enjoyed the "Hauntings in the Caribbean" and "Specters in Columbia". During my travels to Panama, Guatemala, Brazil, Mexico, Puerto Rico, St. Thomas, St. Martin, Belize, Nicaragua, I learned that the people of Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean and South America are true believers in ghosts and show the upmost respect for the spirits that inhabit their lands. Diane Tessman asks: "Why would the spirits of a few people who have died get caught in a repetitive and "undead" web of space-time? Is it because Earth is a hologram? Diane dives right in seeking the answer to her mystifying question. In this book, you get a lot of questions, but also you get a lot of possible answers. This book DOES NOT leave you hanging without answers, it may give you one solid answer or a multitude of possible answers. The book will leave you satisfied, as if you went through a tantalizing buffet of incredible entrees and desserts. You have 363 pages in this mind-altering book. Here is a teaser on what you will get: "Vengeful Ghosts and Spiteful Demons by Sean Casteel", "Hydrological Haints by Tim Swartz", "Time Slip Ghosts by Tim Swartz", "Do UFOs, Cryptids & Ghosts all Connect by (me)", "Did Spring Heeled Jack Ride a Saucer? Nigel Watson", "Haunted Hollywood by Sean Casteel". I really enjoyed a story about "the Stone Throwing Devil". In one of my cases, the ghosts threw pennies. I had everyone raise their hands in the air and the pennies kept on coming. The experience blew my mind. The Stone Throwing Devil is very close to what I experienced. What can I say, this book is AMAZING. After reading this book, you will want to gather your ghost hunting equipment and head out the door to find ghosts! Tim, Sean and the rest of the crew did an outstanding job with The Persistence of Ghosts!

IS LAKE TEKAPO IN NEW ZEALAND HAUNTED?

I went on vacation to Auckland, New Zealand with my stepson Jason Randall Porter and my ex-wife Patricia Mary Roberts (Mitchell). I met a local named Cooper Campbell. Cooper and I, had something in common, we were both interested in the paranormal. Cooper would spend a lot of time at Lake Tekapo fishing, his other favorite past time. Cooper tells me recently via Facebook that he has now seen 3 full body apparitions near Lake Tekapo. I did some research in regard to this lake and this is what I found, see below:

Lake Tekapo
is not widely considered "haunted" in the traditional sense of having famous ghost stories or documented paranormal activity. While some travelers have shared personal anecdotes of eerie encounters or "ghostly" feelings while driving to the lake, there is no established folklore of hauntings tied to the town or the lake itself.

However, the area does have some "creepy" or somber associations:

- The "Cold" Lake: Lake Tekapo is known for being dangerously cold, and at least seven bodies have never been recovered from its glacial waters. (Is it possible that Cooper saw 3 apparitions from the missing 7 bodies?)
- Meaning of "Takapō": The original Māori name, Takapō, translates to "to leave in haste at night," which some find ominous, though it likely refers to historical travel or food-gathering movements.
- Atmospheric Solitude: Because it is a renowned "Dark Sky Reserve" with minimal light pollution, the intense quiet and isolation at night can feel eerie to those unfamiliar with such stillness.

Nearby Haunted Locations
If you are looking for actual haunted sites in the South Island, you might check out:

- Vulcan Hotel, St Bathans: Located a few hours away, this is one of New Zealand's most famous haunted spots, allegedly haunted by a ghost named Rosie in Room 1.
- Napier Prison: Though in the North Island, it is frequently cited as one of the country's most active paranormal sites.

- The Old Ghost Road: A popular mountain biking and hiking trail in the Buller region, named for the "ghost" gold-mining towns it passes through.

Special Note: When I visited Auckland with my ex-wife and stepson, we visited: The Auckland Volcanic Field; Waitomo Glowworm Caves and the Sky City Auckland Casino. At the Glowworm Caves, we entered the cave via a boat.

BELOW IS A BLAST FROM THE PAST!

Subject: Ghost of Dominguez Brum: Speak to Us Sat Jan 26, 2008 3:05 pm QUOTE

Why do ghosts hide? When I investigated St. John the Baptist Catholic Church Cemetery and Lakeside Cemetery Mausoleum with paranormal investigator Cherie Vincent previously two times before, the ghosts seemed to thrive at Cherie's attention. Enough to be recorded on Cherie's digital audio recorder saying things..."we are above the trees", "we miss you". When there is a flock of H.P.I. (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations of Northern California) paranormal investigators that hit the scene, they seem to be afraid of us. They seem to hide. The first time when I investigated these locations with Cherie, I asked to be touched and in a matter of 5 seconds, I was touched. I bled from my knee for no apparent reason and the touch was hot. When the bleeding stopped and I looked at my leg, there was the impression of a thumb on my left knee. I asked to be touched tonight and absolutely nothing happened. Of course, I am writing this article before all of the facts come in play. Did we get anything on this third investigation in Folsom, California on June 29, 2007, Friday with a big full moon out? We'll find out later in FINDINGS and CONCLUSION.

Well, I do know we did get something, I guess I better explain myself. But, can we discuss what I witnessed later on in this article? For right now, let's concentrate on how this investigation got started. The 'flock' as I mentioned before met up first at Snooks Candies & Ice Cream. I picked up Jennifer 'The Jen Girl' Baca at her home and we rode together to Snooks. I was starving and as I entered the store, I asked for 3 chocolates and they were going to charge me $18.00. What? I have been to Belgium and the chocolate doesn't cost that much. I will continue to starve and find another place to eat. Jennifer and I tried to snag a cheeseburger from some bar/restaurant and the cheeseburgers were taking forever to cook and Jennifer and I decided to leave, we didn't want to miss the beginning of the investigation. Ms. Macabre aka Shannon McCabe, the President of HPI gave us a briefing of what might be expected and allowed me to give a little testimonial of what might occur and what happened to Cherie and I, in our two investigations. Brian Colbert and Cherie actually did their own investigation of these cemeteries and received some EVPs and orb digital shots. Both cemeteries seem to be hotbeds of paranormal activity. Two more investigators jump into my car, known at the Ghost Tracker, they were Michele Stump and newcomer Sparky Parker. This was Sparky's first investigation and she was filled with enthusiasm and we could all feel her excitement.

We broke up into two teams. Cherie Vincent who is very familiar with these cemeteries, was the lead investigator of Team Task Force 1 (TTF1). Shannon was the leader of Team Task Force 2 (TTF2). Everyone took out the necessary ghost hunting equipment for our tasks in these two cemeteries. Robin Black in TTF1 caught many orbs on her digital photos. In one photo, she caught 3 orbs in unison and another photo she captured a green orb. Catherine Vincent (sister of Cherie Vincent) caught pictures that showed an orb following another orb. I will be curious as Shannon finishes editing this article, to see what John Wachter aka Vlawde and Michelle Paykel caught in the 'FINDINGS' part of this article. Vlawde and Michelle were part of TTF1 and are seasoned investigators. Jennifer Baca of TTF1 fighting off hunger pains, managed to continue on with her investigations and let's see later if she discovered anything. Jennifer enjoyed showing Sparky Parker the ropes in this investigation. Now back to TTF2, the group I was in. Michele Stump, Patrick Hedges of Diablo Valley Paranormal
(Email: patrick@diablovalleyparanormal.com), Nick and Christie Martisko, Tim Hawkins, Brian Colbert and I followed our fearless leader Shannon. When both teams crossed, Cherie Vincent told me to make sure to show the team Dominguez Brum's gravesite. Why? Because Dominguez is a talkative spirit. He definitely enjoys talking with Cherie and I believe Dominguez is the spirit (or one of the spirits) that told Cherie that he missed her. I told the group to look for Dominguez' gravesite and that I was positive that it was in this one location. Okay, I stand corrected, it was 200 yards the other way, thank goodness Brian Colbert who has been here before knew where the gravesite was. Before I knew it, everyone had their digital audio recorders on Dominguez' gravesite. Okay, Dominguez, speak to us. We're all here listening. When I was sitting near this grave, I actually thought I heard an old man's voice directly behind me. I was actually hearing this from my own ears. Nick Martisko was picking something up on his level meter, that indicates if voices are being spoken. After all the attention was given to Dominguez, we moved onto Marie Laqua's grave - born 1842 and died 1922. Michele Stump noticed that her grave was hot, while other graves weren't hot. Tim Hawkins stepped in and decided that the stone from Marie's grave absorbed the daytime heat and that is what we were feeling. Nick took me to the side and he has an EVP, it was a woman's voice that sounded like Minnie Mouse and she was saying 'hello'. Nick and Christie Martisko asked any spirits to make their presence known and from watching 3 pinwheels on this one grave going counter clockwise, then one pin wheel stopped and started going clockwise, while the other two were going counter clockwise. Patrick Hedges of Diablo Valley Paranormal told me that his flashlight turned on, on its own and it's a hard button to push down on his flashlight. How it came on, on its own is beyond me or Patrick. As we teamed up with TTF1, Sparky showed me a digital photo of white mist that she captured on her digital camera. Brian Colbert captured a distinct clear orb. Shannon says..." we love orbs and we hate orbs." I was disappointed that this time I was not touched by an 'entity'. I asked any entity to touch me many times over and after a while, I sounded foolish. I kept looking at my legs to see if there were any bruising and only saw a mosquito at one point of time, preparing for a meal. Swat!!

I saw Chris Grissom walking over from TTF1 and from the appearance of his face, he seemed not to have captured anything.
I still don't know the FINDINGS or CONCLUSION yet, I will leave that up to Shannon to have all data analyzed. But, from the look of things, the investigation did fare well, but not as well as my very first investigation with Cherie. We did capture orbs, Michele Stump captured a digital photo of what looked like 'dancing orbs' and lightning strips'. So far Nick had the first EVP and I am super curious to see if other EVPs were captured. Sparky was still very excited and she is ready for the Mt. Shasta UFO/Bigfoot Investigation that is coming up soon! I still have not seen a full body apparition and I remember as a boy in San Bruno, I would hitchhike down Sharp Park Lane to Pacifica looking for the boy ghost apparition known as the 'Virus'. The story goes that this 14 year old kid had so much acne on his face, his face seemed disfigured. The school kids would tease him and call him the 'Virus'. On a hill near Sharp Park Lane where there are many trees, the school kids followed the Virus and at some point, they took rocks and stoned him to death. It is rumored that a certain day (the anniversary of his death) that he is seen walking down Sharp Park Lane crying. Why can't I see a full body apparition with my own eyes? I am still searching.....searching....and searching. I ended this night, by driving Sparky to her car, she was still filled with enthusiasm. This is good, we need good energy like this. Jennifer Baca, Michele Stump and I, seek out, not the unknown, but a source of food supplement. We found IHOP in Folsom. Before, I go, I received an email from a reader of my articles and they told me I can find my Room 1408 (referring to the John Cusack movie) by lighting 3 candles in a darkened room and peering through a mirror and summoning "Legion". I don't know if I would ever care to go that far. Legion is a demon made up of many entities of demons and is referenced in the bible and there has been possession cases in which the priest has asked the demons name and the demon says...'we are Legion'. I guess if I am not willing to do something as outlandish as that, I must be a believer. Enough of this demon talk...where is that IHOP waitress?...I'm starving already!!

BELOW IS ANOTHER BLAST FROM THE PAST!

Subject: Paul Dale Roberts' List of The Ten Most Haunted Places in the World Sat Jan 26, 2008 3:03 pm QUOTE

Being a world traveler, I have been to over 59 countries and territories. These are some of the places I have been and I will explain to you why I think they are some of the best haunted places in the world!

1. A Red Light District Studio in Amsterdam: I am submitting a picture of Cindy. She works in the Red Light District of Amsterdam. She has a great personality and I struck up a conversation with her. She told me that the studio that she works out of is extremely haunted. When I took a photograph of her, you can see an orb by her leg. Her eyes and her assets have been blacked out for her privacy. (See photo).
Who traveled with me to this location? No one.
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Belgium; Berlin, Germany.

2. Papeete & Morea, Tahiti: Tahiti is a fun place. You can swim with the dolphins, you can observe the foggy mist that surrounds the luscious green mountains of the islands. This is the place where Mutiny on the Bounty was filmed at. Everything is done by 'island time'. This means if you are going to feed the sharks at 5pm and you are waiting for the bus, the bus may arrive at 6pm. As you travel down the road in this bus, it may do a U-turn so the bus driver can pick up her friend. Then the bus will arrive at the spot where they are going to feed the sharks. Don't worry, everyone is waiting for you to arrive. You arrive on 'island time'. When we rode on this bus, we stopped at a very old cemetery on the island. It was the most creepiest cemetery I have ever seen. The islanders leave all sorts of family possessions on the graves and it is rumored that late at night in this cemetery, spirits have been seen roaming in and around this cemetery. When night falls upon this cemetery, you must remember there are no street lights, so everything is spectacularly dark!

Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: No where else.

3. Umoya Lodge, Auckland, New Zealand: Auckland is a busy metropolis. When I stayed in Auckland, I stayed at the Umoya Lodge. This lodge is rumored to have a Maori doorman ghost that wanders the halls at 3:00 a.m. Once in a great while, a tourist will see this Maori doorman casually walk the halls as if he is looking for something. It is said that he was truly an employee of the hotel and that one night, he suffered a massive stroke while sitting on a couch in the lobby. He has never left the hotel, because he felt the hotel was his home and he loved out-of-country guests. He would always greet the guests of the hotel with a smile.
Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: No where else.

4. Tower of London - England: When I was in England, I visited Stonehenge, Westminster Abbey, Piccadilly Square, East End where Jack the Ripper and the Kray Twins frequented. From England, I took a train to Edinburgh, Scotland and a train back that went through Cardiff, Wales. On this train ride, I was looking for crop circles. I didn't see any. I will never forget my tour of the Tower of London. This place is extremely haunted. Tower of London is on the North bank of the Thames River. This is a place that prisoners were interrogated, tortured and executed. The Kray Twins were the last prisoners of this fortress. Ravens flock to the tower, if the Ravens ever left the Tower of London, the curse says that the Tower of London, The White Tower, the Monarchy and the whole Kingdom would fall. During WWII, most of the ravens were killed, there was one survivor, the Raven's name was Grip. After WWII was over, more ravens came back to the Tower of London. The Ravenmaster now takes care of the Ravens. The ghost of Guy Fawkes who inspired the movie and comic book 'V for Vendetta', was tortured and executed in the Tower of London, he is one of many, many ghosts that haunt the Tower of London.
Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Edinburgh, Scotland and Cardiff, Wales.

5: Puerto Rico: When I stayed in Puerto Rico, I wouldn't say the island is haunted by ghosts, but it is haunted by the infamous Chupacabra! There are many, many reportings of this odd creature. A creature that is vampiric by nature. It seems that this creature has bat type of wings, it sort of resembles a 'gray' alien, it flies, it's agile and it can drain the blood out of a goat in a matter of seconds. Could this be an offshoot of a 'gray' alien? Was there some DNA manipulation done by the 'grays', that created this hideous monstrosity? Did the Chupacabras escape the grays and now are trying to survive on the island of Puerto Rico? It is rumored that there is a UFO base off the waters of Puerto Rico. Many UFOs are seen coming in and out of the ocean that surrounds Puerto Rico. Puerto Rico also is in the Bermuda Triangle. This is a very mysterious island and the Chupacabra legend continues to grow. When I was in Puerto Rico, I did not encounter the Chupacabra. Instead I encountered many beachcombers.
Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter

Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: St. Thomas, U.S.V.I.

6: Bluebeard's Castle, St. Thomas: I went to St. Thomas to see my sister Sharon get married to a guy named Captain Crazy Jeff Voshell. Jeff was the Captain of his own boat called the Orion. He would take tourists to other islands that were nearby in his vessel. He was also a boat mechanic and one of his client's was Morgan Freeman, the movie actor. Captain Crazy Jeff Voshell was a legend on the island and it is rumored that the movie "Captain Ron" was based on him. Jeff was just like Captain Ron, very obnoxious, in-your-face type of guy, a real rugged sailor. My new brother-in-law took me to Bluebeard's Castle, that is reputed to be haunted by the spirits of pirates. Some of the locales claim that the ghosts of the pirate known as Blackbeard and the pirate known as Bluebeard haunt Bluebeard's Castle.
Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Puerto Rico.

7. Dublin Castle, Dublin, Ireland: I have a plaque in my house that reads: Blarney Castle, in the Village of Blarney and the County of Cork, Ireland, I hereby certify that Patricia Mary Roberts, Paul Dale Roberts & Jason Randall Porter of Sacramento, California visited this castle and/having kissed the Blarney Stone is now sent forth with the gift of eloquence which this stone bestows dated this 25th day of March 1997 - signed Richard Lowe(sp) Glohmust(sp) Keeper of the Castle. When I entered this castle, there was a thickness in the air. I would say that Blarney Castle is extremely haunted. There is a fairy passage underneath the castle and I could only walk half way into this dark passage and had to turn back, because I felt a feeling of dread. Are there ghosts at Blarney Castle? You betcha!
Who traveled with me to this location? Patricia Mary Roberts, Jason Randall Porter
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Northern Ireland.

8. Red Square, Moscow, Russia: I saw the Kremlin, Gorky Park, the KGB headquarters and Red Square in Moscow! There is so much history in Moscow, it would take a whole book to talk about it. Stalin was one time displayed at Red Square and his body mysteriously disappeared. I was able to see Lenin's body encased in glass. The very first Cosmonaut is buried at Red Square. Many stories are told by the Russian people that spirits are all around Red Square. Some of the spirits that are rumored to haunt this area are the tragic Romanovs.
Who traveled with me to this location? Jeff Scott Clifford Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: No where else, but did see Norway, Finland and Sweden from the air flying over to Moscow. That was a very incredible sight to see!

9. Kwai Bridge, Thailand: When I was in Bangkok, I had to see Kwai Bridge which inspired the movie based on the true story: The Bridge over River Kwai (starring John Wayne), where many, many American soldiers were tortured and lost their lives. There is a museum that displays the horrific episodes that occurred. The Thai people say the Bridge over River Kwai is very haunted. People have heard moaning sounds as if people were either dying or being tortured. This is a good place for a residual haunting activity. Besides the hauntings, Thailand is a fun place. This is where I went para-sailing for the first time. The hotel I stayed at, Centre Point Hotel, Room 805 was a very tranquil room with many accommodations. The people of Thailand are very friendly and there is so much to do. Why do you think they wrote that song..."One Night in Bangkok by Murray Head"?
Who traveled with me to this location? No one.
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Burma, Hong Kong, Pattaya Coral Island. Flew over Vietnam, Aleutian Islands, Bering Sea, Midway Islands, Laos.

10: Morocco, Africa: When I was walking the streets of Morocco, I kept imagining a dark van pulling up next to me, the doors opening and ski masked men grabbing me and pulling me inside the van and driving me away to some unknown location. I was scared in Morocco, especially after 9/11. I wanted to hurry up and catch the ferry back to Gibraltar. Morocco at one time was a romantic place. Movies are still made in Morocco, like Colin Farrell in the movie Alexander, was partially filmed in Morocco. As you walk down the streets, you can purchase a flying carpet at some bazaar. You can eat Couscous, a type of Semolina pasta. There are many ghostly stories in Morocco. There is talk of haunted synagogues. There is talk of families plagued by demons. Perhaps the demon known as The Legion as seen in the movie Exorcist originates from Morocco. Morocco to me, is scary in many ways, not a place I want to stay for a long period of time.
Who traveled with me to this location? No one.
Where else did I go, when I was on this vacation: Vilar Formoso - Portugal, Gibraltar, Madrid - Spain.

Note: Patricia Mary Roberts is my ex-wife. Jason Randall Porter is my stepson. Jeff Scott Clifford was a close friend of mine. Jeff passed away due to a brain tumor. Jeff was the co-founder of my website Godspeed to Jeff.

There are many haunted areas in the world, what I tried to do is take you off the beaten path with areas that you may not be aware of. Everyone knows about the Tower of London, but how many people know about the cemetery in Papeete, Tahiti? I have a strong interest in the paranormal and that is why I joined H.P.I. (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations) of Northern California. For more information on HPI, check out their website at:

ONE MORE – BLAST FROM THE PAST! LAST ONE, I PROMISE!

Gold Rush Ghosts Saga: The Ghosts of Sunday
By Paul Dale Roberts, GRG Ghostwriter/Ghosthunter

It's a hot day, it feels like Summer already. I know on this day, I'm going to do a lot of outside work. Outside work that will consist of ghosthunting. Pika (my Jack Russell Terrier) and I, headed up to the Broadway Cemetery in Sacramento. There we met up with the rest of the team of GRG paranormal investigators: Danielle Carpenter, Nancy Bradley/Celebrity Psychic, Robert Reppert/Founder of GRG, Catherine Noble, Rodney Roberts, Liz Harrison, Millieanne Jackson, Brian Abeel.

We were investigating three areas this day, that is known for paranormal activity. The first area is the Broadway Cemetery. I have taken my dogs the late T-Rex (Chow) and Pika to this cemetery and Pika once came upon an area and started barking frantically and going around a circle as if there was someone there. There was no one there, but yet he was focused in this area of nothingness. It would be interesting to see if Pika will have the same reaction on this day, Sunday April 13, 2008.

As we surveyed the cemetery using sound enhancers, digital audio recorders, video cameras, digital cameras, temperature gauges, electro-magnetic field readers, we came upon some interesting tombstones. We found one that belongs to the late Margaret Harrigan, that reads: "not as dead, but gone before". I pondered..."what the heck does that mean?" Oh well, as we moved along, Robert notifies me that his video camera at one location indicates 60 minutes left on his battery, as he left that area, then it read 114 minutes left on his battery. It is theorized, that entities are able to drain energy from power poles, batteries and even from people. This was a good possibility. At the Broadway Cemetery, the lead investigators are: Danielle Carpenter and Brian Abeel. Brian and Danielle give us a briefing on the historical characters at this cemetery, such as John A. Sutter, Jr. (built Sutter's Fort and established an empire called New Helvetia); Hardin Bigelow (credited for building Sacramento's first levee system); Newton Booth (lawyer, merchant and politician); General George Wright (fought in Seminole War / Mexican War / Indian Campaigns in the Pacific Northwest); Edwin Bryant Crocker (Justice on California's Supreme Court circa 1863); Jesse Haycock (one of the victims of the cholera epidemic that killed over a thousand Sacramenteans in 1850); Mark Hopkins (Forty-Niner - one of railroad's legendary 'Big Four'); Albert Maver Winn (Sacramento's first city council member in 1849); William Stephen Hamilton (first Treasurer of the United States - son of Alexander Hamilton); Governor John Bigler (California's 3rd governor in 1852); Capt. James T. Homans USN (earliest known burial circa 1858).

At the Mark Hopkins tomb, Danielle & Brian at another time, were drawn to this area. When Catherine Noble used her divining rods, they started responding to this location. Nancy, a top-notch proven psychic was able to touch the above-the-ground tomb and pin-point where Mark Hopkins lay and where his wife was laying. Nancy is pretty incredible, just recently I went to the town of Paradise with Pika to pick up a Rat-Terrier female dog named HPI (pronounced Hippie) Sally. I brought the dog home and placed her in the garage with Pika. I went to take a shower and came out to the garage and HPI Sally was gone, she went through a small hole in the fence. The next day Nancy emailed me and gave me the directions that HPI Sally went and told me that my neighbor to my left either had my dog or saw the dog. She was correct on all accounts, the directions that Nancy gave me were dead-on. Nancy's directions leads to the Laguna Wetlands. The neighbor to my left had stopped me and told me she saw HPI Sally running with another terrier (color black) in the Laguna Wetlands. Later Nancy told me that HPI Sally was running around with a dark colored dog and she feels HPI Sally's heart beating, so she is still alive.

Pika found a location that he got excited at, it was the tombstone of A.C. Kidder, the tombstone reads: "Born 1825 - We Shall Meet in the Morning". Pika stayed at this location as if he was interacting with something that we could not see. Nancy Bradley feels a high energy level at the gravesite of Elizabeth Bryte. The divining rods picked up strong energy at the Masonic gravesite of P.L. Lykins. Nancy demonstrates how you can feel energy. You must close your eyes and when your body starts leaning towards a certain direction, your body picks up on the energy, you have an imbalance or like I would call it...'a vertigo moment'. Nancy Bradley came upon the gravesite of Velma Frances Bradley and she was determined to find out how she died, since she carries the same last name. As Nancy concentrated, she determined that Velma died of a breathing problem, possibly pneumonia. Nancy also points out an interesting area and felt like it was an unmarked grave. We came upon 12 tombstones that were marked with the year of death as 1964, for all 12 tombstones. Nancy determined they all died in a major fire, she could feel a rush of heat (like fire) that went from her feet to her head.

Robert Reppert discovered areas that should be walkways from various markers that have been placed in the ground, but yet gravesites dotted the walkways, which was very unusual. Brian gets a reading of 3.4 on his EMF Reader at the gravesite of Mary E. Bawden and being a sensitive, he was being bombarded with messages in his mind, as if the late Ms. Bawden was trying to relate her story to him. Pika again stopped at another location, the Stafford tombstone and became excited. It appeared he was detecting something at this gravesite.

After we left the Broadway Cemetery, we convoyed back to Nancy Bradley's home. I had an enjoyable ride with Catherine Noble in my car, as she told me some of her interesting guests, that she has on her show 'Journey into the Paranormal'. Catherine is a very fascinating woman that has had many experiences herself and it was a pleasure to hear about her adventures.

At Nancy Bradley's home, we debriefed and prepared to get ready for the next two investigations, while enjoying pizza and sodas. The next location was the Diamond Springs Cemetery. Lead Investigator: Paul Dale Roberts. I gave everyone a briefing that Nancy Bradley, Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' McCabe and I, did a preliminary investigation at this cemetery. I was using a Listen Up Sound Enhancer and picked up a little girl's voice, that say..."hey, you". Nancy was able to pick up the area of the little girl's gravesite. As we left this cemetery, the little girl beckoned me with a "hey", as if she was trying to get my attention.

We came back to this cemetery to see if we could make contact again with the little girl. Instead of using a Listen Up Sound Enhancer, we had a much larger sound enhancer that had recording capabilities. I was using this high tech sound enhancer as I combed the cemetery. I had all of the investigators attempt to get some EVPs. At 3:38pm, I picked up what sounded like a man whistling at the gravesite of "John, son of J & E Stanley". Pika at this location, did not detect any paranormal activity, he was too busy digging into gopher holes. When he was done digging, he was a filthy mess.

Finally the third area of investigation the lead investigators were Liz Harrison and Millieanne Jackson. The area of question is called the Wal-Mart Grove. Nearby Robert Reppert found an old farmhouse in which he used a metal detector and found old soup cans circa the 1800s. The area in question Millieanne has picked up what she calls 'Indian energy'. The energy at this area has a calming effect. The calming effect is suitable for Brian Abeel to use his windpipe and play a song that was dedicated to his deceased cat named Booker. I can feel Brian's pain, since I recently lost my Chow named T-Rex. It was a great way to start the investigation into the Wal-Mart Grove, where there is a lot of positive energy from a time long ago.

Since Nancy Bradley is a renowned American psychic, she teaches her investigators to use their sixth sense in an investigation. Nancy tells me I have a sixth sense, but as a journalist and a ghosthunter, I still enjoy the findings done by scientific means. That is where Nancy's husband steps in, he uses the scientific approach of discovery and seeks out to prove or disprove impressions that are felt in certain areas. The only sensitive that Robert can't disprove is his own wife Nancy. Nancy can get an impression at a certain location and Robert can follow it up later with either photographic evidence or a captured EVP.
